Organizations Co-ordinate. An interesting meeting was held at the Calvary parish house on Friday morning, with the rector, Dr. W. D. as well as the women who did not beong to them.

This idea was presented in the parish many years ago, and was again torcefully brought forward in 1914, when an article upon its advantages was published in "The Living Church," but demands for specific war work prevented its development at that time. While new when first suggested, it has now in some form been introduced in many large churches and has been found to be most efficient.

The working forces of the Calvary parish were well represented at the meeting, not only those in charge of the women's organizations, but the Sunday school and choir guild as well.

A temporary chairman was appointed,
also a membership committee, composed of a representative from each organization.

The presence of these official visitors with the vice-president and the officials of the state department and the always hospitable secretary of the navy as hosts, has naturally been the occasion of many interesting gatherings in which smart gowns, uniforms and jewels have all played a conspicuous part.

As Dr. Pessoa has not yet taken the oath of office and our officers of army and navy are in war-time uniforms until the peace treaty is signed the large reception of the Pan-American building on Tuesday evening as well as the several formal dinners lacked somewhat in gold lace and side arms, but this restriction in no way affected the dress of the feminine guests, many of whom like Madame Pessos, who is just from Paris, having gowns that are the last word in summer fashions.

Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, who were bright particular stars in the gayety of the week, maintained a standard of dress equal to the height of the January season in Washington or New York, the June season of London before the war, or the August season, as hoped for at Newport in the present year.

Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, who is remaining in town through June, is wearing a smart but plain gown of white voile made with the three-tiered skirt which may be gathered or plain and preserve its claim to a front rank in summer fashions. Mrs. Corbin's tiers are ungathered with the three-tiered skirt which may be gathered or plain and preserve its claim to a front rank in summer fashions. Mrs. Corbin's tiers are ungathered with the top of the gown suggestive of the Kinjena with dozens of little voile buttons marking the sides of the skirt and the straight wide sleeves, the latter ending half way between wrist and elbow.

Madame Riano, wife of the Spanish ambassador, at one of last week's after noom receptions, wore a beautiful pale blue chiffon over blue silk with a contrasting note in black jet and satin. The base of the long tunic and the bodice were embroidered in lines and rings of jet beads which, with the broad satin girds and a fascinating hat of black tulle, made this a conspicue sily smart midsummer contume.
